Good Morning PAs,

Please see the message below and circulate to your teams to determine if DRG has enough equities or should delegat this to another hub.

Thank you,

Charwin

Hi DRG team,

Please see below for a meeting request for the Administrator. Given the topic of discussion it looks like there are DRG equities. Please let me know if this should be directed to another hub.

"Susan would like to request a meeting with Administrator Power to discuss a range of critical issues of mutual interest including: access to information globally; combating misinformation and disinformation globally, as well as YouTube's positive economic, social, and civic impact, in democracies, as well as in closed and illiberal societies in across the the world. She'd also love to discuss how we might work together on these shared values."

Thanks,
Sofie

> Susan Wojcicki is CEO of YouTube, the world's most popular digital video platform used by over two billion people across the globe to access information, share video, and shape culture. An early champion of online video who was instrumental in Google's 2006 acquisition of YouTube, Susan now oversees YouTube's content and business operations, engineering, and product development.

Prior to joining YouTube in February 2014, Susan was Senior Vice President of Advertising & Commerce at Google, where she oversaw the design and engineering of AdWords, AdSense, DoubleClick, and Google Analytics. She joined Google in 1999 as the company's first marketing manager and led the initial development of several key consumer products including Google Images and Google Books. In 2002, Susan began working on Google's advertising products and over the next 12 years she led teams that helped define the vision and direction of Google's monetization platforms.
